Bloodhounds Now on Trail of Person Who Killed I. Disato on Lonely Road, Without Apparent Motive.

(Special Correspondence to Herald.) Aguilar, Cal., July 20.—While riding to the place for another Sunday night, Leon Disato, an Apolonia valley ranchman, was suddenly murdered by an unknown assailant. He was attacked upon a lonely road about a half mile from the city and five shotguns were discharged into his body at close range. As yet no clue has been discovered that will positively identify the murderer.

The five shots were distinctly heard in the town and immediately a party of citizens rushed to the scene of the crime. Disato was found in a heap by the side of the road and signs of a terrific struggle were evident in the dusty road.

CLOVIS PEOPLE GO ON TRIP ABROAD

Presbyterian Church Will be Helped on Its Way by Generosity of Those Who Make Journey.

Clovis, N. M., July 20.—A large part of the population of the city took advantage of the summer vacation offered on Tuesday evening by the Ladies Aid society of the Presbyterian church, and went on "the trip around the world." The union station was the starting point. Here the ticket agents Miss Margaret Wilson and Dr. Van Housen sold for the small sum of $2.00 a round trip ticket to Europe and return by Tokyo. The automobiles left every 20 minutes with all the passengers they could carry and frequently more, the excursionists before leaving the United States were given a typical New England dinner at the beautiful home of Mrs. Pittsford. Every room was gay with the national flag and the colors red, white, and blue used in elaborate and artistic decorations. Mrs. Chambers acting as conductor punched the tickets and the guests were ushered into the dining room where they were served the following dinner: Chicken and dressing, Boston baked beans, and brown bread, and butter, tea and coffee.

After a hurried goodbye to friends the voyage across the ocean began. The first country reached was Ireland, the home of Mrs. John McManis, where "Paddy" greeted the wayfarers with the glad hand and the dinner he ordinarily eats was served to them by a fetching Irish cook whose native dress added to the picturesque scene in which the cloth decorations were shamrocks and ribbons. The travelers next destination was Germany, the hospitable home of Mrs. P. H. Holland on West Grand avenue. The house was decorated to represent a holiday occasion in that land and the national colors and flags had been arranged by skillful hands to give the desired effect and give a decided local color. Superb and beautiful were the table left no doubt in the minds of the travelers as to the country in which they were now sight seeing.

A long and stormy voyage and the passengers arrived in Japan the residence of Mrs. Andrew Hockmuller in East Clovis. After landing they entered a fairly large lighted Japanese lantern and were seated in "native fashion" on cushions on the floor. Dainty little maids of the "Flower Kingdom" in bright kimono brought in trays with native dishes. The food was especially good but the travelers were glad they were not asked to eat it with chop sticks. Soon after embarking from this port a frightful wreck occurred. No one was hurt, but the party was forced to walk the remainder of the journey across sea and land to Ice Land, the pretty home of Dr. and Mrs. Von Almen. Each one involuntarily shivered as this region of snow and ice was entered. Cotton sprinkled with glistening powder had been formed into snow banks, and bushes hung from every corner. In the center of the table a snow image and piles of snow formed an attractive decoration. Ice cream and cake were served and the weary travelers returned to their homes. The funds raised by the Presbyterian church on this occasion will go toward the erection of a new church which they hope to build in the near future.

Mrs. Bargandy (at bell name)—Dear! What a miserable little bit this is! He ought to be ashamed of himself. Bargandy excitedly—Why, you marblehead, that's a sacrifice.

Mrs. Bargandy—O-o-o-o! And is that why so many players rushed to it?—Puck.

AGED COWBOY SHOWS OLD-TIME PLUCK

Seven Days and Nights on the Prairie Without Water or Food Makes Way to Ranch House With Broken Hip.

Torrone, Mex., July 20.—An example of fortitude and bravery, characteristic of the old time Mexican ranchman and herder, was shown during the recent revolution by an employee of the Parrot hacienda near Santa Rosalia, owned by members of the Torrone Construction company.

Jesus Gandara, nearly 70, is employed to look after the stock on this large estate and as he is of the old school, and makes his bed where night overtakes him, his prolonged absence on the occasion of an injury he sustained did not attract attention.

He went south to the Soto ranch to get a few cows and while on his way to other ranches, on his return, his horse, turned over with him breaking Gandara's hip. One of the Torrone men writes:

"Well, the horse did not show up for six days. Of course, we did not think anything of that, as Jesus sometimes goes to the different ranches and does not return for six days. But the horse was nearly dead for water and we knew something had happened to Jesus and hastened to notify all the neighbors and went on a search."

"Of course I expected to find him eaten up by wild beasts, but, on the eighth morning, after the horse had been found, I found him near Diaz station, almost dead. He stood it seven days and nights on the malpais hills without water or food. He picked up his horse and made his way to water and food. Pretty good work for a 70-year-old cowboy."

Gandara was a daring character in his youth and among those who tell his prowess was a noted Pancho Villa whom he killed many years ago.

UGLY TEAM CAUSES ANOTHER INJURY

Sixteen Hundred Pound Mares That Ran Over and Killed C. C. Collins, Throw Employee Out in Runaway.

(Special Correspondence to Herald.) Carlsbad, N. M., July 20.—The 1600-pound team of 4-year-olds that ran over and killed C. C. Collins of this city last Sunday was the cause of another serious accident. One of Mr. Collins' employees who was driving the horses as town property, lost control of the spirited animals and was thrown from the wagon, sustaining serious injuries.

The body of C. C. Collins was buried with military honors here at 7:30 Monday evening, the departure of the body being postponed on account of the death of Guardsman Collins. A local epidemic of trouble and a brother from Texas attended the funeral. According to what can be learned of the accident, Mr. Collins had driven the horses out to his ranch about three miles below town and had loosened the traces, he thought, and removed the bridle. However, it seems, Mr. Collins had neglected to unhook one of the traces, whereupon the team started, and in the endeavor to stop them Mr. Collins was run down and trampled on, and struck by a part of the wagon. He sustained internal injuries that prevented his death with in nine minutes.

FARMINGTON MAN IS AN INVENTOR

A. J. Fritz Perfects Device to Mix Gas Between Carburetor and Intake Which Affects Great Saving.

Farmington, N. M., July 20.—August J. Fritz of this city has just patented a new mixing device for gasoline engines which has been given a thorough test and has been found to be a little wonder. Mr. Fritz has had one of Dr. Fortin's automobile for some time and the experiment has been watched with interest by local automobilists and mechanics. It has been found that this instrument when attached between the carburetor and the intake pipe gives one-fifth more power on one-third less gas than when the engine is without it. The saving is about three inches long by three inches in diameter. It is heated by the exhaust and consists of a series of copper wire screens through which the gas must pass and becomes thoroughly mixed. It is a very simple little contrivance but does the work wonderfully. Mr. Fritz has already sold several of the machines to those who have been watching the test, and in the near future will manufacture them on a large scale. For the present he is having a few made to supply the present demand. Mr. Fritz is a thorough mechanic and is well versed on automobiles and gas engines and his patent is the result of considerable experimenting and study of the question.

GENERAL J. BLANCO RESIGNS OFFICE

Asks to Be Relieved from Duties as Municipal Chief of Ciudad Juarez To Confine Time to Military Affairs.

San Jose, Mex., July 20.—Brig. Gen. Juan de los Rios has presented his resignation as municipal chief of Ciudad Juarez in order to confine his attention to military and police matters. He will remain military director of the rural police forces in northern Chihuahua. His successor as civil mayor of the town is not known, but his resignation will be submitted by Juan N. Molina, a prominent colonel of insurgents and former business man of the border city.

General Blanco yesterday received his commission as commander of rural forces from the federal government at the national capital. He is commissioned by President de la Huerta, and the document is signed by M. Chavez, a sub-secretary. Blanco held the same position for commander of the provisional government of the state of Chihuahua but the document just arriving leaves in question as to his permanency in the position.

Since the capture of Juarez, Blanco has been serving both as civil and military chief of the city. This arrangement, however, was not only confusing, but more than one person could properly manipulate. So the former insurgent chief welcomes the change, allowing him to devote his entire time to an organization of a rural police service, similar to the former federal "bureau" system, and formerly employing the material offered by the discharged soldiers of Madero's army. Gen. Pascual Orozco holds the same position in the south of the state, and also has been daily commissioned by the federal government.

RECIPROCITY WITH MEXICO WANTED

Mexico City, July 20.—Reciprocity with Mexico is even more important than with Canada, and I hope when the pending treaty is signed the United States will at once open negotiations with this country, said R. R. Ryan, traffic manager of the Mexican Northwestern railway system.

"There are many articles produced in one country that the other country needs and by placing them on the free list trade would be greatly benefited. The duty collected upon Mexican lumber is very small and our country exports a great deal of lumber to Mexico. A number of other articles that pay a high duty on both sides of the Rio Grande and if this duty was removed it would be a great business. Possibly the new government in examining some of the old concessions may decide that the tariff is too high, but in making it both nations a reciprocity treaty should be made."

Mr. Ryan stated that trade was ever along the line of the Northwestern and that everyone was at work. However, there is a scarcity of labor and that companies are paying two pesos or more per day. Recently published stories were greatly exaggerated, he said, but out of a shipment of 500 men only about 50 had demanded to be paid in gold.
